An Evening Echo.

A man has no more right to say an uncivil thing, than to act one; no more right to say a rude thing to another, than to knock him down.
—JOHNSON.

Teddy's "Good" Trust.

The following article appeared in the New York Tribune, May 10, 1912:

In the estimation of ex-President Roosevelt the "International Harvester Company" was a "good" trust, so good, indeed, that he refused to permit it to be prosecuted for violation of the Sherman anti-trust law after his friend, George W. Perkins, had assured him of its beneficent character. In this connection some supporters of the president have noted with interest the statement of Cyrus H. McCormick that the sales of the trust of which he is president amounted last year to $108,033,535, that these paid dividends on the preferred stock of $4,200,000 and permitted $7,321,698 to be carried to the surplus. In view of the fact that $80,000,000 of common stock does not at all represent money paid into the concern, the profits for the last year were much larger than the figures indicated. Of course, even as they stand, the profits may seem large to those farmers who were compelled to buy harvester, reaper, seeder, plow, rake or harrow from the Harvester Trust and to pay its price, or go without; but then, it is remarked the farmers should not object to some measure of extortion, for had not the Harvester Trust maintained a complete monopoly and paid such handsome profits, how could Mr. Perkins now contribute so liberally to the much needed campaign fund of Mr. Roosevelt?

Public Health Education.

Enlightened public opinion is the most potent force toward better public health and sanitation. Physicians will succeed in their campaign for prevention of disease in proportion to the understanding of the value of health measures by the public and its co-operation to secure them.

The Journal of the American Medical Association recently commented on the desirability of more co-operation between physicians and churches in public health education. The Men and Religion Forward Movement, which has caused a nation-wide sensation, has not restricted its activities to purely religious matters. Various social problems have been attacked; for example, a careful analysis of conditions in various cities that resulted in recommendations for improved sewerage and quarantine systems, protection of milk supply, organizations of health departments, better opportunities for harmless recreation, improved garbage collection, etc.

In many cities excellent results followed the work. The fundamental basis was a survey of actual conditions, that is, the tabulation of all the ascertainable facts in the case before taking action. This is merely touching on the medical phase of this movement. Its chief work, of course, was religious, but the movement seemed to attack the human problem in all its ramifications—spiritual, social, physical—and to recommend improvements wherever it was thought wise.

It is evident that the element of public education on health conditions is working. Great improvements in the sanitation and hygiene of the American people are due in short order as soon as the public is awakened to the possibilities.

Teddy and Railroads.
While president of the United States President Roosevelt was a persistent receiver of special favors from railroads. He invariably traveled in special trains furnished by the railroads free of cost, until, in the last days of his administration, Congress put an end to the disgraceful proceedings, when the railroad presidents themselves began to criticize the president, by voting $25,000 a year for traveling expenses.

During the first two years of his administration President Roosevelt made twenty-five railroad trips, many on special trains, at the expense of the railroads. The longest was in 1903 when he made a sixty-two-day trip of 22,000 miles on a train that would cost a private citizen at least $1,000 a day. During that year and the next he used special trains on at least three other occasions, including one two-weeks' trip to New England. A bill for $1,800 for food and drink and cigars and laundry on one trip made by Roosevelt was attempted to be collected by the New England roads in vain.

The Pennsylvania road, then under influence of interests now close to Mr. Roosevelt in this campaign, was usually entrusted with the job of furnishing the special trains, and with arranging the railroad itinerary. In return therefor, the railroad friends of the president had unusual favors in the matter of obtaining advance information as to legislation favored by the administration both for and against the railroads. This was, of course, a "square deal" as between Roosevelt and the railroads and the people paid the freight.

Vehicles and Crossings.

Recent automobile accidents in which pedestrians have been killed, emphasize the often reiterated statement that the street crossings are reserved for pedestrians whenever they see fit to use them. The crossings are extensions of the sidewalks. When they are clear of foot passengers, traffic of every kind may traverse these crossings at any speed within the limitation of municipal ordinances. When they are in use by pedestrians, the drivers of vehicles must regard the crossing as part of the sidewalk, and as they would not drive their vehicles upon the sidewalk they must respect the prior right of those who temporarily use the street crossing to reach the sidewalk on the opposite side of the street.

If necessary, the drivers of automobiles and other vehicles must stop to let pedestrians on crossings pass by. Their mere honking of a horn does not absolve the drivers from the consequences of an accident. The rule is proved by the custom in all cities of placing policemen on the crossings in sections where the traffic is congested. These policemen are instructed to stop the traffic whenever pedestrians are crossing the street. In this instance the pedestrian is always given the right of way.

Many of those who drive automobiles through the streets seem to be of the opinion that it is only requisite to honk their horns and "slow down to six miles an hour" at crossings. They are mistaken, and some of these mistakes have resulted fatally for persons unable to dodge the swiftly moving vehicles.

The drivers of vehicles should observe more caution and discretion in approaching and while traversing the street crossings.

SUTHERLAND

"One of our townsmen, Senator Howard Sutherland, has just announced his candidacy for congressman-at-large. It is fitting that from here, where he has been intimately known for the last twenty years, some expression of confidence and esteem should go forth to other sections of the state. A substantial farmer speaking of Senator Sutherland's candidacy, recently said: 'When you have tried a man in every way for years and found him all right, you know what he is.' A prominent Democratic business man with nearly twenty years of close association, says: 'In all the years that I have known him, I do not know a single thing against him, personally or in a business or political way. He has always been clean and honorable. He can be de-

HEAD OF WOMAN'S WORK INVESTIGATION EXAMINING LABOR CONDITIONS IN U. S.

Miss Mary Van Kleeck.

Miss Mary Van Kleeck, head of the investigation of women's work under the direction of the Russell Sage Foundation, is now touring the United States investigating labor and wage conditions among women workers in the principal cities. It is said that she has found shocking conditions in some of the largest towns.

YOU LOOK SO WELL

Just say that to a woman and see her eyes sparkle with pleasure. She knows there is no beauty like the beauty of health.

Unfortunately, at this time of year so many women are in a weakened, run-down condition that there are few to whom one can say it.

Here is what the Wheeling Intelligence says of him:

"Honorable Howard Sutherland, of Elkins, has announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for congressman-at-large. Mr. Sutherland is a member of the state senate, and in that body has rendered distinguished service to the people of West Virginia. He is a business man of high standing, high character, energetic, forceful and well informed. There are few men in the state better equipped for important public service than Mr. Sutherland. He will be a strong candidate for the nomination and should be nominated he will bring strength to the Republican ticket."

The Charleston Mail adds its tribute as follows:

"Senator Sutherland is well and favorably known throughout the state. He is a progressive, deserving citizen, a fair, open and honest politician, a clean man in every respect, and he is one of the most loyal Republicans we have ever had. The pleasure of knowing personally throughout a long term of years."

"During his entire service in the Senate, covering a period of four years, Senator Sutherland time and again proved himself a really big man. He was on the right side of every piece of legislation that has been written on our statute books since he entered the Senate, and he favored many commendable bills that did not become laws. As a candidate for the high position of congressman-at-large—and the party of the entire state will vote on his candidacy—he will present much of the ideal to the party, much of the commendable in citizenship, much of the praiseworthy in statesmanship, much of the ability that should be considered in every candidate for nomination and he will rally under his banner admirers from every county in the state."
